

BUS SHELTER DESIGN COMPETITION

WE WILL BUILD IT THIS SPRING!

TYPICAL NYIT OLD WESTBURY CAMPUS BUS SHELTER [EXISTING]

DESCRIPTION

You might have heard about Home₂O [formerly known as SodaBIB] - NYIT Architecture Professors Gandhi, Van Nest, and Bertomen have been working with students on the invention for the last year or two - see <http://sodabib.org/>

We plan on building our first full-scale shelter this Spring and we want YOU to design it!

Students are asked to use the Home₂O roof construction system in the design of a new bus shelter for temporary [and possibly permanent] use on a designated site at NYIT's Old Westbury campus.

This competition is open to all currently enrolled architecture and interior design students with a GPA of 3.0 or higher.

Winners get a cash prize of $300. First, second and third place teams will also receive a paid spot on the construction team + IDP credit towards licensure.

Check out <http://home2o.org/> for a full set of competition rules and requirements. Stay tuned for updates on awesome people who agree to be on the competition jury!

Also, be sure to stop by the Information Meeting on October 17th to learn more! If you have any questions, please email Prof. Farzana Gandhi at fgandhi@nyit.edu.

Winner and Runner ups Announced

KICKSTARTER

The Home₂O team received a limited grant from NYIT to build the shelter. A Kickstarter campaign in concert with this competition will raise additional funds for construction.

Student submissions will be featured in the Kickstarter campaign as a way to draw attention to the invention, the fundraising and the designs. The campaign may also feature public voting for a favorite student design. The team reserves the right to use submitted images to invite backers to express their choice. This winning team of the public vote will receive the "Public's Choice Award" and bragging rights within NYIT and also in the world at large.
